About Cockburn's

Cockburn's is a Port house founded in 1815 by Robert Cockburn, a Scot, with its lodges in Vila Nova de Gaia opposite Porto. It became one of the best-known names in Port, particularly in the British market.

Since 2010 it has been owned by the Symington family, who have restored its focus on vintage Port. Its main estate is Quinta dos Canais in the Douro Superior. Cockburn's vintage Ports are known for a firm, dry style and great longevity, and older vintages are sought after by collectors.

About the wine

Cockburn's Vintage Port is made only in declared years from the best wines of the Douro, a blend of traditional varieties such as Touriga Nacional and Touriga Franca. Bottled young and unfiltered, it is dense and tannic at first and needs twenty years or more to soften, developing great complexity over decades. It throws a heavy sediment and is decanted before serving.
