About Roberto Voerzio

Roberto Voerzio founded his own estate in La Morra, in the Barolo zone, in the mid-1980s, and it quickly became one of the best known producers of single-vineyard Barolo. His holdings include parcels in some of La Morra's most respected crus, among them Brunate, Cerequio, La Serra and Rocche dell'Annunziata.

Voerzio is known for extremely low yields, achieved through dense planting and severe green harvesting, giving concentrated, deeply coloured wines. Production of each cru is small, and the wines are highly prized by collectors of Barolo.

About Barolo, Brunate Capalot Riserva

This Riserva comes from old vines in Brunate, one of the great crus of La Morra, together with the neighbouring Capalot plot. It is made only in selected vintages and released after extended ageing. It is a powerful, concentrated Nebbiolo with dark cherry, tar and floral notes and firm tannins, built for very long cellaring.
