About Poggio Antico

Poggio Antico is an estate in Montalcino, in southern Tuscany, with vineyards set at relatively high altitude on the southern side of the hill. The elevation brings cooler nights and helps the estate make Brunello of freshness and aromatic lift alongside the depth expected of the appellation.

The estate makes Brunello di Montalcino and a Riserva, together with Rosso di Montalcino and other wines, all centred on Sangiovese. The style is classic and balanced, and its Brunello is a reliable, age-worthy example of one of Italy's most important red wines.

About Brunello di Montalcino

Brunello di Montalcino must be made entirely from Sangiovese grown in the Montalcino zone and cannot be released until the fifth year after the harvest, after a period of ageing in oak. Poggio Antico's high vineyards give a Brunello of cherry, herb and leather character with bright acidity and firm tannins. It typically drinks well from around ten years and keeps for twenty or more.
