About Smith Woodhouse

Smith Woodhouse is a Port house founded in the late eighteenth century, now owned by the Symington family, who also own Graham's, Dow's and Warre's. It has a long-standing following in Britain for its Vintage Port, which is made only in declared years.

The house draws on vineyards in the Douro Valley, including Quinta da Madalena in the Rio Torto valley. Smith Woodhouse Vintage Port is regarded as a well-made, traditional wine.

About the wine

Smith Woodhouse Vintage Port is made in declared years from a blend of grapes from the Douro, including Quinta da Madalena. It is a full, structured Port with dark fruit, spice and firm tannin when young. Like all Vintage Port it needs many years in bottle, typically twenty or more, to reach maturity, and it can age for decades.
