About Hundred Acre

Hundred Acre is a small, privately owned Napa Valley winery founded by Jayson Woodbridge, who came to wine from a career in finance. It makes very limited quantities of Cabernet Sauvignon from a handful of its own vineyards, each bottled separately, and sells mostly through a mailing list.

The style is rich, concentrated and opulent, with ripe fruit and a polished texture, and the wines are made with great attention to detail in the vineyard and cellar. Hundred Acre has become one of Napa's cult names, and its small production keeps the wines in high demand.

About Fortification, Napa Valley

Fortification is Hundred Acre's fortified red, made in the style of port from Napa Valley fruit. Grape spirit is added during fermentation to keep natural sweetness, and the wine is aged before release. It is rich, sweet and concentrated, with dark fruit and spice, and like vintage port it can be cellared for many years.
