About Gould Campbell

Gould Campbell is a long-established Port house, founded in the late eighteenth century and now owned by the Symington family, who also own Graham's, Dow's and Warre's. Its wines are aged at the family's lodges in Vila Nova de Gaia.

The house is best known for its Vintage Port, made only in declared years from Douro vineyards in the Symington holdings. It is regarded as a traditional, well-made Vintage Port.

About the wine

Gould Campbell Vintage Port is made only in declared years from grapes grown in the Douro Valley. It is a rich, dark and structured Port with black fruit, spice and firm tannin when young. Like all Vintage Port it needs many years in bottle to mature, typically twenty or more, and can age for decades.
