About Trotanoy

Château Trotanoy is a small Pomerol estate owned by the Moueix family of Libourne. Jean-Pierre Moueix bought Trotanoy in 1953, and it is now run by Établissements Jean-Pierre Moueix, the family's Libourne business.

The vineyard lies on the western side of the Pomerol plateau, on clay and gravel soils that are hard and compact when dry. Trotanoy is regarded as one of the leading wines of the appellation, and its powerful, long-lived wines are well regarded by collectors.

About the wine

Trotanoy is a Pomerol made mostly from Merlot with a little Cabernet Franc. It is dense, powerful and deeply coloured, with dark plum fruit, earthy and truffle notes and firm structure. It is slower to open than many Pomerols, generally needing ten to fifteen years, and the best vintages keep for several decades.
